7 Weeks, 3 Days

(AT RISE, MARI is sitting. She can be reading or at her computer. She is thin and dressed in comfortable (yoga?) clothes. EMMA enters and quietly looks at MARI for a moment.)

MARI
Emma! How long have you been standing there?

EMMA
Just for you know – a second. You look … great!

Liar.

EMMA
No – really. Absolutely. I didn’t know /

/What to expect?

MARI
Yes.

EMMA
It’s been ages. Well actually, seven weeks and three days but who’s counting?

MARI
I know. I’m sorry. My mom said you were “away.” Hard to visit someone when you don’t know where they are.

EMMA

EMMA
I didn’t know. Nobody did. I mean I called and my mom called /

/And then you stopped calling.

EMMA
Kind of. Sorry. (Beat.) Sooo… coming back to school anytime soon?
MARI
The prevailing theory is “maybe in two weeks.” Which I have heard for seven weeks and three days.

EMMA
How will you catch up?

MARI
I have this tutor. Comes three days a week and gives me all this – stuff. Stupid, stupid stuff. I mean who cares about extinct species when you could be extinct?

EMMA What?

MARI
I’m sick.

EMMA
But… sick as in “Get Well Soon,” “Wishing you a Speedy Recovery,” /

MARI
/“Sending you thoughts and prayers” – that’s a personal favorite. No. Sick as in, “we’re going to try this and see what happens…”

EMMA
I didn’t know – Mari. Nobody knows anything. There were all these rumors – maybe Mari is in trouble – maybe rehab – maybe Juvie Hall – all sots of stuff -

MARI Whaat?

EMMA
Sorry. Shouldn’t have said –

MARI
How’s that possible – I’m the poster child for people pleasing. The original “good little girl” who never stands up for herself. Of course, what do they say? “Only the good die young?” Funny how easy it is for people to think the worst.

EMMA
Sometimes we fall overboard looking for drama.

MARI
My days are filled with drama.
EMMA
Why so quiet? I mean nobody knows anything. I finally took the plunge and called your mom. Again.

MARI
My mom wanted to keep it in the family. Till everything was settled and we had answers to all the questions people ask. She … has a hard time answering questions right now. Most of the time she is a puddle.

MARI
- do you have trouble answering questions?

MARI
If that’s your way of asking, what’s wrong with me. It’s called AML: acute myeloid leukemia.

EMMA
Is … that bad?

MARI
Hard to say. It’s different for everyone. Mine has been a bit stubborn even with chemotherapy, I had to do some targeted drug therapy which does not make me feel great.

(Beat.)

EMMA
I don’t know what that means.

MARI
I wish I didn’t know what it means. My white blood cells are at war with my red blood cells. The white blood cells have been winning some battles. But all is not lost! We forge on to new battlegrounds. (Beat.) It’s a form of cancer.

EMMA
I’m sorry. I keep saying that! Because I don’t know what to say. The only people I have known with cancer were – old.

MARI
Do I look old?

EMMA No.

MARI
‘Cause I want to be. You know – old. I want to grow old.
EMMA
You will! Of course you will! Don’t talk like that!

MARI
I have to say it. Nobody let’s me say it. Nobody talks about dying. I could die, Emma and nobody will talk to me about it. Please, let me talk.

EMMA
If it – will help you. (Beat.) I don’t like dying talk.

MARI
I don’t either. Believe me. But I think it needs to be part of the conversation.

EMMA
I don’t know what to say. Again. (Beat) … will you?

MARI
I don’t know. Everyone says “looking good.” But then they try a new drug. It’s a guessing game.

(Beat.)

Tell me about school. I’ve been so out of it.

EMMA
It’s kind of same-old, same-old. Oh! Mrs. Hudwalker’s leaving.

MARI
Hooray! Did everyone dance in the halls?

EMMA
On the cafeteria tables. The lunch ladies were furious!

Oh I wish I was there!

MARI
And - at the choir concert - Mr. Crane came up to the podium and laid a really bad, smelly one. The choir couldn’t sing – because half of them couldn’t breathe and the other half couldn’t stop laughing!

MARI
Poor old smelly Crane! He’s like an old dog. Faithful, well-meaning and flatulent.
EMMA
He probably wanted to curl up and die!

MARI
I don’t think he wanted to die.

EMMA
I didn’t mean –

MARI
No worries. Dying comes up a lot in conversation. “Do or die!” “Old habits die hard!”

EMMA
“I’d die for some chocolate!” Oh! Chocolate. The good kind.

(She takes a small box of chocolates out of her purse.)

MARI
Ohhh! Now, this is worth dying for.

EMMA
Can you – eat it?

MARI
I’m going to try. And I am not sharing.

(Beat.)

EMMA
It’s all different now, isn’t it?

MARI
It doesn’t have to be. It’s just – been months since we were together. If we talked more…

EMMA
We will. I promise. I’ll call you every night. No. Wait. I have rehearsal. I’ll call after school.

MARI
You’re in a play!
EMMA
Chorus. Nothing to get excited about but yeah, I’m in a play. Beauty and the Beast. At least I’m not the Beast. But yeah – I’ll call you.

MARI
Cross your heart and hope – cross your heart and - everything?

EMMA
Cross my heart – and everything.

I’d like that.

EMMA
Me, too.

MARI
I have to rest now. I hope you don’t mind. I get this medicine and it makes me sick and tired which I am sick and tired of. Don’t know which is worse! The disease or the medicine.

EMMA
You can tell me about it. Talk to me, Mari.

MARI
I won’t scare you away for another seven weeks and three days?

Not a chance.

EMMA
I will. I’ll call tomorrow around this time.

I’ll be waiting.

(EMMA starts to exit.)

MARI
You’re going to google AML, aren’t you?

What? No/

MARI
/You’re going to google it.
EMMA
Probably. How do you spell it? Acute…..

MARI
Just type in AML. It’ll come up. Believe me. I know. And then we’ll talk some more. Not just about this – but about everything. Music, boys, Beauty and the Beast - even – you know - the future… and you’ll visit again?

EMMA
It’s a promise. Save me a chocolate.

MARI
Not a chance.

(They smile. EMMA again starts to leave.)

MARI
Emma? I’m not contagious.

(There is a long pent-up hug and finally EMMA exits. MARI looks at her chocolates.)

MARI (cont’d)
Maybe tomorrow. I’ll have one tomorrow. (Beat.) Thanks, Emma.
